The flourishing condition of the bibliography of Government documents in the United States, Great Britain, and a few other countries seems to be a result of centralization in Government printing and distribution.

A generation ago the United States Government as a publisher was in the embarrassing position of the monotonous college lecturer who halted in the midst of a sentence to ask Mr. Smith in the tenth row to wake up the man in front of him, only to receive the reply, "Come up here and wake him up yourself; you put him to sleep."

One of the principal factors in awakening the "sleeping" Government documents distributed so lavishly over the United States, both to depository libraries and to individuals, was the propaganda of Dr. John G. Ames, for many years superintendent of documents in the Department of the Interior. Through close contact with libraries he realized keenly that so far as current reference use was concerned the bound volumes of the congressional series were distributed very slowly, so slowly that they had frequently become "ancient history" before reaching the consumer. In addition to dealing with the eccentricities of the congressional series, Ames was continually emphasizing the necessity for centralizing the distribution of all Government documents except those required for official use.

In accordance with the increasing tendency to centralize Government printing, the printing act of January 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L. 601–624), provided for the centralization of distribution. In creating the office of Superintendent of Documents at the Government Printing Office the act intrusted the superintendent with the carrying out of three important bibliographical projects, the Document Catalogue, the Document Index, and the Monthly Catalogue, and authorized him to obtain from the Public Printer and from the various branches of the Government copies of each and every document issued, with the exception of those confidential in character.

Due to the enterprise and foresight both of Mr. F. A. Crandall, the first Superintendent of Documents at the Government Printing Office, and of Miss Edith E. Clarke, in charge of compiling the first two volumes, the Document Catalogue, the comprehensive index of all public documents specified in the printing act, has had from the very first a dictionary arrangement, with authors, titles, and subjects all in one alphabet, Government departments, bureaus, commissions, etc., being treated as authors in accordance with Cutter's rules for corporate entry. Titles are transcribed exactly from the title page. Pagination is given accurately and in full detail. There are numerous explanatory notes about series, contents, publications that have been released from the confidential status, etc. Even maps and charts, Army and Navy regulations, briefs, and transcripts of record are listed with a wealth of bibliographical data unknown to the catalogues of Poore and Ames.

The Document Index, designated in the printing act as the comprehensive index of congressional documents, is issued for each session of Congress. Under a joint resolution of Congress in 1908 authorizing the distribution to depository libraries of the annual and serial publications of the various branches of the Government immediately upon issue without the congressional document number upon the title page and in the binding used by the issuing department, only the Library of Congress, the Senate and House Libraries, and the Document Office receive the complete bound set of the congressional series. In the future active use of the Document Index will probably be more and more confined to the four libraries in Washington.

With regard to the Monthly Catalogue, the printing act of 1895 states that it "shall show the documents printed during the preceding month, where obtainable, and the price thereof." The entries are arranged under the issuing departments. Full titles, accurate statement of the pagination, notes about the series, reprint editions, contents, etc., of course, seem somewhat complicated in comparison with the much briefer information of the English Stationery Office Consolidated List, yet are often more useful in identifying the publications accurately. Further, for convenience in obtaining the publications themselves, the Monthly Catalogue indicates, in addition to prices, whether the documents are for sale by the Superintendent of Documents, whether application should be made to the issuing offices, or whether they have been printed for the special official use of the executive departments. Even maps and charts produced by bureau lithographic printing plants not immediately connected with the Government Printing Office are listed with full descriptions. From the total output of the United States Government as a publisher, confidential publications, individual Drawings and Specifications of the Patent Office, and the mass of mimeographed issues[1] alone are excluded from the Monthly Catalogue, United States Public Documents (with prices).[2]

The Checklist of United States Public Documents, 1789–1909, with the lists of congressional and departmental publications extending to nearly 1,700 pages, marks a great advance over the 120-page first edition by John G. Ames in 1893, especially in completeness and fullness of notes. Even the first edition proved to be of so much value to libraries that a second was soon edited and issued in 1895 by the Superintendent of Documents at the Government Printing Office from the revised manuscript prepared by John G. Ames, including for the first time the serial numbers for the volumes of the congressional series. As an intermediate stage between the second and third editions of the Checklist, the Tables and Index was issued in 1902, covering the congressional series from the beginning with the Fifteenth Congress through the Fifty-second Congress. Although the tables have since been superseded, the index is still valuable for reference, especially since the index volume to the third edition of the Checklist has never been issued. The third edition is practically a shelf list of the public document library in the office of the Superintendent of Documents. A few groups, such as committee hearings,[3] Senate executive documents, reports, etc., are not complete, owing to the difficulty of locating all issues. Other groups, such as the bills and resolutions of both Houses of Congress, which are not distributed to libraries, maps and charts in many instances, and [1] An effort has been made by a committee of the Special libraries association in the following publication to indicate a plan of treatment for mimeographed issues: Descriptive list for use in acquiring and discarding United States Government periodical mimeographed statements, including advance press releases, preliminary and informal reports issued at frequent intervals, with notes indicating the permanent documents in which the data appear if republished. Providence, R. I., 1929. [7], 76 leaves (mimeographed). 27½ cm.

[2] The series of Price Lists, although containing only publications in the stock of the Documents Office, are frequently most useful in locating material by subject, the following being a list of those now in print: 10, Laws; 11, Foods and cooking; 15, Geological survey; 16, Farmers' bulletins; 18, Engineering and surveying; 19, Army and militia; 20, Public domain; 21, Fishes; 24, Indians; 25, Transportation; 28, Finance; 31, Education; 32, Insular possessions; 33, Labor; 35, Geography and explorations; 36, Government periodicals; 37, Tariff; 38, Animal industry; 39, Birds and wild animals; 40, Chemistry; 41, Insects; 42, Irrigation, drainage, water power; 43, Forestry; 44, Plants; 45, Roads; 46, Agricultural chemistry and soils and fertilizers; 48, Weather, astronomy, and meteorology; 49, Proceedings of Congress; 50, American history and biography; 51, Health; 53, Maps; 54, Political science; 55, National Museum; 58, Mines; 59, Interstate Commerce Commission; 60, Alaska and Hawaii; 62, Commerce and manufactures; 63, Navy; 64, Standards of weights and measures; 65, Foreign relations; 67, Immigration; 68, Farm management; 69, Pacific States; 70, Census; 71, Children's Bureau; 72, Publications of interest to suburbanites and home builders; 73, Handy books; 74, A Bibliography for debaters. The Price Lists are revised from time to time.

the original prints of the first 14 Congresses, are not represented in the third edition. Yet, with the recent exception of Italy, such a comprehensive work in the national bibliography of government documents is to be found in no other country than the United States.

To turn now to the principal works concerning United States Government documents not mentioned in the above statement of the activities of the office of the Superintendent of Documents at the Government Printing Office:

For the earliest period, that of the Continental Congress, 1774–1789, we are indebted chiefly to the work of Paul Leicester Ford and to the bibliographical notes in the Library of Congress edition of the Journals of the Continental Congress.

For the original issues of the first 14 Congresses, 1789–1817, we have the bibliography by Gen. A. W. Greely, based principally upon the collection in the War Department library, which has since been transferred to the Library of Congress. Unfortunately, on account of his official duties in the Spanish-American War and later in the Philippines, General Greely was unable to give the work the thorough revision he had contemplated before it was printed in 1900.

For the entire period of 1774–1881 there is the chronological Descriptive Catalogue by Ben: Perley Poore, clerk of the Senate Committee on Printing Records. Previous to the undertaking of this catalogue an abortive attempt had been made, through two Senate resolutions[4] submitted by Francis M. Cockrell, of Missouri, on March 24, 1881, to direct the heads of executive departments and the Secretary of the Senate to report to Congress complete lists of the publications issued by the departments and by the order of Congress. On December 8, 1881, Senator Cockrell introduced a bill authorizing the preparation and publication of the descriptive catalogue and providing an appropriation for this purpose. The bill was finally approved by the President July 27, 1882 (22 Stat. L. 176). After Poore had been placed in charge of preparing the catalogue the Joint Committee on Printing, to avoid issuing the work in two bulky volumes, directed that the titles be written in a more condensed form, thus impairing "the fidelity of description in each individual title." Although especially deficient with regard to the departmental issues, owing to the difficulty of working without a large and extremely complete collection of United States Government documents available, Poore's Descriptive Cata- logue nevertheless presents the useful result of an enormous amount of patient industry.

To bridge the gap between the Forty-sixth Congress, with which Poore ends, and the Fifty-third Congress, with which the Document Catalogue begins, a joint resolution of Congress approved March 3, 1897, authorized the preparation of an index to all publications of the Government, 1881–1893, under the direction of John G. Ames, in accordance with the alphabetical subject arrangement of his previous Comprehensive Index now to be superseded. Again we note the difficulty of bibliographical work without a large and extremely complete collection available for reference when Ames states in his preface that it has been impossible for the heads of the executive departments, bureaus, and offices of the Government " to furnish every document issued during the 12 years covered by the index, so that it is probable that in the aggregate quite a large number of publications, chiefly, however, of an ephemeral character, are not noted in the work."

To turn next to the official publications of the States, Territories, and insular possessions of the United States, we have had to depend for comprehensive bibliographies in great part upon other initiative than that of the governments themselves, since there is relatively little centralization of State printing and distribution.

The first attempt at systematic cataloguing was in the American Catalogue of 1884–1890. Mr. R. R. Bowker introduced this new feature in the endeavor to build up, if sufficient cooperation were available, an adequate bibliography of State publications from the very beginning of the governments. We have his statement " that a large proportion of State publications are not of general interest outside or indeed within the State, yet for comparative purposes their record may be important and valuable, and, aside from perfunctory or merely administrative reports, there is a surprising wealth of material in State as well as Government issues." His effort at issuing a provisional list in four parts between 1899 and 1908 was financially so unprofitable that he did not even look forward to a revised edition but merely trusted the work might " form the basis for a really complete and adequate bibliography of State publications."

During the period of Bowker's work the department of economics and sociology of the Carnegie Institution of Washington became interested in the indexing of State documents with reference to economic history, financial matters in particular, as an aid to the future worker. On undertaking this stupendous task at the New York Public Library Miss Adelaide R. Hasse interpreted the term "economic" broadly, omitting only material in reports of bureaus of labor statistics previous to 1902.[5] As Miss Hasse proceeded State by State she began to record increasing difficulties in the attainment of a complete record of the State publications and their content. In Kentucky destructive fires at Frankfort apparently accounted for the disappearance of certain volumes of the Journals and Collected Documents. The multiplicity of hitherto unrecorded editions complicated the problem of bibliographical description. Documents in German editions existed to an unknown extent in New Jersey, Ohio, and Pennsylvania. With the volume for Ohio Miss Hasse tried as an experiment the introduction of personal names of authors of articles, reports, etc., in the topical index in order to identify the names of prominent men with the services rendered by them. Although the index for 13 States[6] was finally completed, work ceased apparently on account of the discontinuance of the department of economics and sociology at the Carnegie Institution of Washington in December, 1916, associated with other unfavorable conditions.

With 1910 the Library of Congress began the publication of a periodical record for the new State publications currently received. This Monthly Check List, compiled under the direction of the Chief of the Division of Documents in lieu of the numerous routine acknowledgments, has aside from developing one of the most important features of the Government document collection at the Library of Congress been a valuable bibliographical aid in focusing attention upon the increasing value of material in state documents for current reference use. Even legislative bills, press releases, and mimeographed issues have been listed in full detail in so far as receivd.

Antedating even the Monthly Check List, the California State Library in 1906 began listing current California State publications, and later also the California city publications, in its News Notes of California Libraries. With the fiscal year 1915–16 the Arizona State Library commenced the issue of an annual Check List. With the year 1917 the State Historical Society of Wisconsin started a Check List of Wisconsin Public Documents. Beginning with July, 1923, the Minnesota Historical Society undertook a similar State Check List.

[6] Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, California, Illinois, Kentucky, Delaware, Ohio, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

Among the more recent important bibliographies issued at the expense of the State governments may be mentioned the following: Swem's Bibliography of Virginia, published in the Bulletin of the Virginia State Library, 1916–1919; Miss Elmer's Check List for the Philippine Library and Museum in 1918; the Reference List, published by the State librarian of Washington in 1920; and Streeter's Michigan Bibliography, issued by the Michigan Historical Commission in 1921.

To turn now to Great Britain with its present centralization of printing and distribution at the Stationery Office in London: For the current publications there is the Consolidated List of Government Publications, which began in 1922 as a continuation of the two lists, one for the Parliamentary Papers and the other for the Stationery Office publications. It is issued as an annual cumulative number of the Monthly List of Government Publications, and, generally speaking, records in brief fashion only those documents for sale by the Stationery Office. In addition to the Consolidated List the Stationery Office issues a Monthly Circular of Recent Selected Publications.

For the Sessional Papers of both the House of Lords and the House of Commons there are several comprehensive indexes. In 1836 the House of Commons ordered printed a Catalogue of Parliamentary Reports, 1696–1834. Concerning this work there is the observation in the prefatory note that, " considered separately, perhaps some of these early reports may be deemed of too little importance or too long out of date to need mention in the catalogue; but when their connexion with the subsequent reports on similar subjects is observed their relative importance may make them interesting; thus the report in 1698 on the state of East India affairs, from which the present company took its rise, may be thought fit to precede the long series of reports relating to that most important portion of the British Empire which have since been printed; and the reports in 1778 and 1779 on the state of prisons, in which the philanthropist Howard suggested improvements in prison discipline; and on the penal colonies, in which Sir Joseph Banks proposed the settlement, under the name of Botany Bay, in the new discovered country, which is now considered the Australian Continent, must be deemed worthy of notice." In addition to this catalogue for the period 1696–1834 there is a series of general alphabetical indexes to the bills, reports, estimates, accounts, and papers, printed by order of the House of Commons, and to the command papers covering the years from 1801 to 1919. For the House of Lords the volumes of the general index to the Sessional Papers cover only the period from 1801 to 1884–85.

For further assistance in searching material in the Parliamentary Papers there are the two series of sessional indexes and the unofficial Catalogue of Parliamentary Papers of P. S. King & Son, which covers the years 1801 to 1920 in three volumes. This latter does not pretend to be exhaustive and is somewhat unsatisfactory to use on account of the scanty bibliographical information.

Among the few other countries where the bibliography of government documents is flourishing due to the centralization of printing and distribution we will mention Italy first. By a royal decree of January 18, 1923,[7] further elaborated in a decree of September 24, 1923,[8] the office of State Purveyor General was created in the Ministry of Finance. Among the various duties assigned to the new office was that of the coordination and printing of official publications. In 1924 a check list of the publications issued by the State or with State subvention during the entire period from the establishment of the Kingdom of Italy in 1861 to 1923 was published under the direction of a departmental committee composed of the State Purveyor General, the Secretary of the Chamber of Deputies, the Librarian of the Alessandrina, the Honorary Librarian of the Chamber of Deputies, the Librarian of the Senate, and the Librarian of the Chamber of Deputies. In 1928 the second and final part of a subject index to the periodicals and collective works issued during the first quarter of the twentieth century was published under the direction of this same departmental committee attached to the office of the State Purveyor General.

Of the other countries India alone has an extensive array of annual bibliographies, not only for the Government of India but also for those of the Provinces, as well as lists of publications for sale at the various Government presses and book depots. By an order of the Governor General in Council on March 12, 1868,[9] publications printed or published under orders of the Government for official use were exempted from the detailed provisions of the act of 1867[10] for the regulation of printing presses and newspapers, for the preservation of copies of books printed in British India, and for the registration of such books. Lists of the nonconfidential publications exempted from registration—that is, the official documents—have been issued for many years, even previous to Campbell's Index-Catalogue of Indian Official Publications in the Library, British Museum, in 1900. Beginning with 1908, the collective annual lists seem to have been superseded by individual ones for the various departments of the Government of India and for the different provincial governments. In comparison with the English Stationery Office Consolidated List, these Indian annual lists of nonconfidential publications exempted from registration exhibit a remarkable fullness of bibliographical detail.[11]

Even Germany had accomplished but little in this field previous to 1928.[12] Aside from the parliamentary proceedings, laws, and scientific publications, the Government documents seem to have been but little known except among the officials of the issuing departments. At present there is a changing attitude toward the hitherto restricted circulation of the departmental publications, in order that citizens may be better informed concerning the administration of the Government.

Beginning with January, 1928, the Monatliches Verzeichnis der reichsdeutschen amtlichen Druckschriften prepared by the Deutsche Bucherei of Leipzig has been published regularly by the German Federal Ministry of the Interior. This monthly catalogue of German official publications is the first of its kind comparable to the Monthly Catalogue, United States Public Documents, to be issued in continental Europe. The Monatliches Verzeichnis includes not only the federal documents but those of the states [13] and larger municipalities. Also, in answer to the growing interest in official publications, the Prussian State Library in Berlin issued late in 1928 the first part (Jan.–June, 1927) of a semiannual accession catalog for German official publications. This accessions catalog includes notes of the shelf numbers for the convenience of readers at the Prussian State Library.

Even in the Netherlands the International Exchange Service of the Royal Library has issued in 1930 the first annual list of Dutch official publications.

[13] Anhalt, Baden, Bavaria, Bremen, Brunswick, Hamburg, Hesse, Lippe, Lübeck, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Oldenburg, Prussia, Saxony, Schaumburg-Lippe, Thuringia, Württemberg.

The condition prevailing in France stands in contrast to the above. In December, 1913, a committee of the Chamber of Deputies reported [14] in connection with a proposal to centralize the printing and distribution of official publications that it was practically impossible to establish a bibliography of Government issues. Lists transmitted by the various issuing offices were not always complete or exact. Examination of a recently issued catalogue of official publications placed on sale at the Imprimerie Nationale simply serves to emphasize the point that many items not represented are still issued by the various departments through the book trade or issued only for special official use.

Elsewhere the bibliography of Government documents seems to consist mainly of stray price lists, library catalogues, and a few indexes of parliamentary papers and proceedings. Indeed, the overwhelming accomplishment in the United States as contrasted with Great Britain and a few other countries prompted the legend prefixed to this account, "Made in the U.S.A."
